After weeks of social media outrage from all angles, Jorginho has issued a public apology to Chappell and her team. Since 21st March, many social media sites have been flooded with hot takes about an interaction with 34-year-old Jorginho Frello's daughter and a security guard that was presumed to be a part of pop-star Chappell Roan's security team backstage at the music festival Lollapalooza.

Now, in a lengthy Instagram story, Jorginho has apologised to Chappell, stating that 'it became clear that [Chappell] had no knowledge of what took place at breakfast,' and that 'it was, ultimately, a misunderstanding.' He also confirmed that the accused security guard was indeed representing a different artist at the time.

Jorginho initially stated that his daughter noticed and smiled at Chappell Roan during breakfast before a 'large security guard' accosted her and her mother, claiming that his daughter was harassing and disrespecting the artist, and threatening to file a complaint with the hotel.

He discussed his personal experience with public exposure as a world-renowned footballer, but stated that what happened was far from simply enforcing boundaries. He ended this statement by calling out Chappell Roan directly, saying '@chappellroan WITHOUT YOUR FANS, YOU WOULD BE NOTHING. AND TO THE FANS, SHE DOES NOT DESERVE YOUR AFFECTION.'

Weeks went by with no word from the Flamengo midfielder whilst social media went to war with one-another about what really happened and who was in the right. But now Jorginho is putting the debate to rest, detailing how, at the time, he acted defensively due to his desire to protect his family and could not sit by and allow them to be talked to in such a harrowing manner.

He discusses how he made his first comment in the heat of the moment, and was acting 'as any father would' after his wife and child were approached by an adult, male security guard. He closes his statement by saying that 'as far as [he is] concerned, the matter is closed.'
